FENIAN DEMONSTRATION.—On Saturday night, the closing meeting of a series was held by the Fenian Brotherhood in the Academy of Music. Quite a large number of persons were present. Mr. Stephen J. Meany was the first speaker, and he had a most interesting and stirring address. It was an eloquent effort, designed to show that the situation in Ireland is held by James Stephens, and in America by John O'Mahony, and that if Irishmen furnish them with the means of war, Ireland will herself soon hold the situation. It was not impossible for any of her true sons to forget England's persecutions, and it would be to forgive them. They are indelibly marked upon every Irishman's heart, and neither time nor circumstance can efface them. Mr. Meany reflected the idea that England was to be reached through Canada. James Stephens had never entertained it for a moment. It was upon Irish soil that the battle must be fought and the victory won, and it was to be fought as soon as the hour had come to strike the blow. The speaker then earnestly appealed to the friends of Irish nationality to subscribe to the bonds.

General B. F. Mullen followed Mr. Meany, and discussed the question, "What is a revolution?" He understood that there are three requisites to justify a people in resisting an established government:—1st, a good cause; 2d, the probability of success; and 3d, that in the event of failure, the people are not to be left in a worse condition than they were before. These things have been fully considered by the Fenian Brotherhood, and they are prepared to risk all in the effort to free Ireland. No one would deny that Ireland had not a good cause to strike at the British Government. Their wrongs and persecutions are on every tongue, and are impressed upon every heart. The probability of success could not be a doubt. With three hundred thousand of Ireland's sons for the fray, and animated by the thought that they were to be fighting for the holy cause of human freedom, there could be no doubt of success. General Mullen said if the effort should fail it would be impossible for Ireland to be in a worse situation than she now is. The speaker referred to English neutrality during the late Rebellion, and said that the only way to honestly object to the United States following the precedent she had herself made.

MAIL AGENT ARRESTER.—John G. Mellinger, mail agent on the Reading, was arrested by S. B. Row, special agent of the Post Office Department, for tampering with mails in his custody. It is alleged that for several months Mellinger had been sending to Philadelphia, and other places along the line of the road, letters addressed to the names of the Fenian Brotherhood, and that he had been prepared a number of letters, some of which were missing the next day, and on searching young Mellinger, after his arrival at Reading, evidences of his guilt were found on his person. Mellinger was brought to Philadelphia, and on the 21st inst. he was committed before U. S. Commissioner Aubrey Smith, when, in default of $5,000 bail, he was committed to prison. Mellinger served a couple of years in the army.

THE GALE OF SUNDAY.—The high wind which prevailed during Sunday will long be remembered. Through the entire day shutters, windows, doors, and other things were rattled about with considerable fury. In numerous cases fences were prostrated, staves blown down, awnings torn from their fastenings, and other articles were considerably injured by the force of the wind. Unfinished houses suffered considerably, and in one case, at least, that of a house at Twentieth and Carpenter streets, the roof was hauled from its position with great violence, much to the consternation of persons living in the neighborhood. The Delaware river also presented a peculiar appearance, lashed as it was in fury by the high wind. The shipping suffered considerable damage from the turbulent element.

INTERESTING SERVICES AT ST. JOSEPH'S CHURCH.—On Sunday evening the spiritual retreat, held in the church during the past week, closed with appropriate ceremonies. An immense congregation was present, every part of the church being crowded to excess. In numerous cases the services were prostrated, staves blown down, awnings torn from their fastenings, and other articles were considerably injured by the force of the wind. Unfinished houses suffered considerably, and in one case, at least, that of a house at Twentieth and Carpenter streets, the roof was hauled from its position with great violence, much to the consternation of persons living in the neighborhood. The Delaware river also presented a peculiar appearance, lashed as it was in fury by the high wind. The shipping suffered considerable damage from the turbulent element.

HOLY TIME.—In the Episcopal and Catholic churches, yesterday was observed as Palm Sunday. The day, as all are aware, is observed in commemoration of the triumphal entry of the Saviour into Jerusalem. The people, according to sacred writ, strewed branches of palm trees in the road as He passed, in honor of the distinguished visitor. Yesterday the services in the Catholic churches were largely attended, and the ceremony of blessing the palm and the distribution of it among the faithful was quite imposing. The observance of Holy Thursday, Good Friday, and Holy Saturday, will conclude the solemnities of this interesting season, and next Sunday will be kept as Easter Sunday.

SLIGHT FIRES.—The alarm of fire shortly after 2 o'clock yesterday morning was caused by the partial burning of Anderson's tavern, at the northwest corner of Front and Marion streets. About 12 o'clock yesterday morning an alarm was caused by a chimney taking fire at the corner of Moyamensing avenue and Market street. Last evening the carpenter shop of Michael Quinn, at No. 332 Market street, was slightly damaged by fire, supposed to have been the work of an incendiary.

BURIAL OF A FIREMAN.—The remains of Edward Marsh were interred on Sunday afternoon, from the hall of the Sligher Fire Company, in Reed street, also been a member of the 72d Regiment P. V. He fell in front of Petersburg in June, 1864. The remains were followed to the grave by a large number of people.

BOY DROWNED.—A lad named John Hoff, while playing in a boat at Laurel street wharf, yesterday morning, accidentally fell overboard and was drowned. The body was recovered and removed to the residence of his parents, No. 907 N. Delaware avenue.
